

2018 CONNECTICUT ARCHITECTURE FOUNDATION SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED

The Connecticut Architecture Foundation Scholarship annually grants scholarships to students pursuing degrees in an Architectural Program. Either a B-Arch or M-Arch degree at a Connecticut accredited university, or Connecticut residents pursuing a degree at other accredited universities, are eligible.

Since 1986, the Foundation has awarded over $500,000 in scholarships.

This year, seven students will each receive a $5,000 scholarship from one of three Scholarship Funds – The Charles DuBose Memorial Scholarship, The Suzanne Sheng Memorial Scholarship, or the Connecticut Architecture Foundation Scholarship.

“The Connecticut Architecture Foundation Board of Directors are proud to be able to once again offer financial support to college students as they continue their studies in the built environment,” said Jay Brotman, President of the Connecticut Architecture Foundation, and Managing Partner at Svigals + Partners. “All of this year’s recipients have come from varied backgrounds, but their accomplishments are to be commended.”

Congratulations to the 2018 Recipients of the Connecticut Architecture Foundation Scholarships!

Nabila Shahid Ahmed, Meriden, CT, a Master of Architecture Student at the University of Hartford, was born in Bangladesh and immigrated to the United States at 15 years old. She is a member of Tau Sigma Delta Honor Society in architecture and Allied Arts and is currently at SKM Design LLC in West Hartford as an entry level designer while working toward her master's degree.

Thomas Eugwong Lee, Wilton CT, a Masters of Architecture student at Roger Williams University, worked with Italian Architecture students in Florence, Italy to design an installation. He is an AIA mentor to Roger Williams University first-year architecture students.

Sarah Freja Morsches, Trumbull, CT, is a Bachelor of Architecture student at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. While at RPI, Sarah presented for two Studio Honor's Final reviews, had multiple projects selected for archiving for the school's publications, had two of her sculptures featured in a student exhibition, and served as a Course Assistant for a First Year Studio.

Alix Marie-Louise Pauchet, New Haven, CT, a Master of Architecture Student at Yale University, was involved in Island Design Assembly, a design-build program that brings together students and architects to design, build and install projects for island communities in Penobscot Bay, Maine. Prior to joining Yale, she worked in Vermont, Paris, and Sydney, and did field research in the North Indian Himalayas on the use of concrete in a region that previously primarily relied on rammed earth construction.

Xiachui Wen, a Master of Architecture Student at Yale University has interned in San Francisco and Beijing on both commercial and residential projects. She appreciates the intimate scale of a house which challenges the designer to understand how body and life are contained in limited space. Xiachui is also the recipient of the 2018 Component Scholarship Program Award.

The 2018 recipient of The Suzanne Sheng Memorial Scholarship:

Alison M. Notation, Wolcott CT, a Bachelor of Architecture student at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute is a Rensselaer Medal for Excellence in Mathematics and Science recipient. In May 2017, Alison was presented with the School of Architecture's First Year Faculty Award and served as a mentor in RPI's Women's Mentor Program. She plans to serve as a mentor within the School of Architecture.

The 2018 recipient of The Charles DuBose Memorial Scholarship:

Louis Koushouris, Cos Cob, CT, is a Master of Architecture Student at Yale University. Louis is passionate about new building materials and fabrication techniques and using design as the impetus to facilitate public life.
